

Politics in the Pub

Deaths At Work

In honour of workers who have died of occupational accidents & illnesses.

A simple wooden cross marks the spot where 37-year-old Paul Walsh was killed while working with a small drilling team on the NBN rollout in Station Street, Katoomba. He was one of 178 people killed at work in Australia last year.

Workers International Memorial Day is held annually and this year Blue Mountains Unions & Community is holding a special event to remember the dead and fight for the living.

FREE ADMISSION!

Family Hotel, 15 Parke St, Katoomba
Saturday, 29th April, 2017 from 2.30pm to 4.30pm

Includes Q&As from the audience .

Rita Mallia

The speakers:

President CFMEU Construction & General Division, NSW Branch

"On average across Australia one construction worker is killed each week and many more are seriously injured. Past experience shows us that the re-establishment of the Australian Building and Construction Commission will reduce safety on sites and lead to more deaths, as it's focused on stopping union access to sites rather than ensuring companies follow the rule of law in maintaining safe worksites"

Emma Maiden

Assistant Secretary, Unions NSW

"Workers are being killed and maimed at alarming rates. Yet the NSW Government has decimated the system that was meant to provide support for injured workers until they get back on their feet"

Rowan Kernebone

Co-ordinator, Injured Workers Support Network

is an advocate for a fairer system of workers compensation for injured and ill workers and their families. The IWSN's priority is to help injured workers gain the services to which they are entitled.

Asupiced by MCRN, the Mountains Community Resource Network

Media contact: D. Smith bmucinc@gmail.com or 0408238586

Authorised by D. Smith Secretary, Blue Mountains Unions Council Inc, 52-52A Great Western Hwy, Mount Victoria, 2786.

Politics in the Pub

Deaths At Work

In honour of workers who have died of occupational accidents & illnesses.

A simple wooden cross marks the spot where 37-year-old Paul Walsh was killed while working with a small drilling team on the NBN rollout in Station Street, Katoomba. He was one of 178 people killed at work in Australia last year.

Workers International Memorial Day is held annually and this year Blue Mountains Unions & Community is holding a special event to remember the dead and fight for the living.

FREE ADMISSION!

Family Hotel, 15 Parke St, Katoomba
Saturday, 29th April, 2017 from 2.30pm to 4.30pm

Includes Q&As from the audience .

Rita Mallia

The speakers:

President CFMEU Construction & General Division, NSW Branch

"On average across Australia one construction worker is killed each week and many more are seriously injured. Past experience shows us that the re-establishment of the Australian Building and Construction Commission will reduce safety on sites and lead to more deaths, as it's focused on stopping union access to sites rather than ensuring companies follow the rule of law in maintaining safe worksites"

Emma Maiden

Assistant Secretary, Unions NSW

"Workers are being killed and maimed at alarming rates. Yet the NSW Government has decimated the system that was meant to provide support for injured workers until they get back on their feet"

Rowan Kernebone

Co-ordinator, Injured Workers Support Network

is an advocate for a fairer system of workers compensation for injured and ill workers and their families. The IWSN's priority is to help injured workers gain the services to which they are entitled.

Asupiced by MCRN, the Mountains Community Resource Network

Media contact: D. Smith bmucinc@gmail.com or 0408238586

Authorised by D. Smith Secretary, Blue Mountains Unions Council Inc, 52-52A Great Western Hwy, Mount Victoria, 2786.